Laub withdraws lawsuit

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

Now that it has adopted a budget to her liking, Granite City Township Assessor Darlene Laub will drop a year-old lawsuit against the Town Board.

Last week, the Town Board unanimously approved a $905,990 township budget for the fiscal year that began last March 1.

"I notified the attorney the next day," Laub said.

"We're all happy with the results from Tuesday night. It's over and hopefully we'll all move forward to the betterment of the township."

The budget includes $328,440 for the assessor's office, $310,550 for the supervisor's office, $7,000 for the town collector, $218,000 for general assistance and administration, and about $40,000 in other expenses.

Two weeks ago, the Town Board rejected an identical budget by a 12-3 vote which followed more than an hour of discussion with Laub.

Trustees had said they were concerned about benefits offered to assessor employees, including lost productivity time due to vacations and the possibility that workers laid off last year would once again begin to accumulate sick days, even though they were paid for accumulated but unused sick days last year and the sick day payout is intended to be a one-time benefit at retirement.

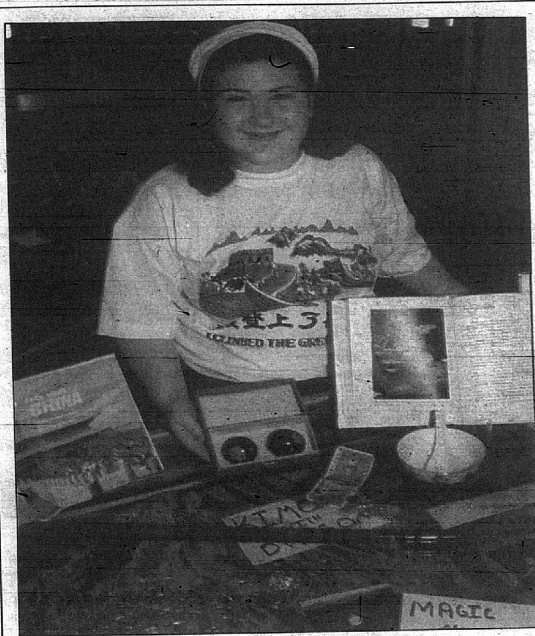

They also expressed concern that Laub might not make good on her promise to drop a two-count lawsuit against the Town Board.

But the day after the debate, Laub filed a revision in her office benefits plan which limited its lifetime compensation for unused sick time at 45 days.

She also showed the trustees a letter expressing her intent to drop a year-old lawsuit against them for their refusal to pass a budget to her liking last year.

Last year, the Town Board cut Laub's proposed budget by 25 percent more than halfway through the fiscal year. Laub then filed the lawsuit that alleged that the budget cut was politically motivated and that Audrey DeLay, 15, Granite City, spent three weeks in China this summer, and although she said she'd do it again, there were some things she definitely missed about home — good soda, good food and good friends.

Audrey, daughter of Al and Lucille DeLay, will be a junior at Granite City High School. Last fall, when she heard about a student ambassador program which was going to China for three weeks in the summer, she was immediately interested.

So, she went to a meeting in Belleville on the topic. There, a group of students, mostly college students, explained to Audrey and other interested participants what it would be like to be People Student Ambassadors. The students told the other students what to expect, and Audrey decided to go.

First, though, Audrey had to have two (See CHINA, Page 6A)

Strike threat?
Madison superintendent, union head trade chargesBy Hiley Schulte

The interim Madison schools' superintendent says the Madison teachers' union has threatened a strike, but the president of the teachers' union denies that accusation.

At the Madison School District 12 Board of Education's meeting on Thursday, Hilda Everage, interim superintendent, charged that Don Smith, Madison teachers' union president, came into the District 12 office earlier in the week and asked: "So, you're going to be the superintendent when we're on strike in August?"

Smith, who was also at the meeting, said that he did not, at any time, say the teachers were going to strike. Smith also said he feels the board is directing a personal attack against him.

Since the board and the teachers are currently involved in contract negotiations, the board recently sent the teachers' union, via Smith, a written request that all contract business be conducted in writing to allow ample preparation time for both sides.

The board said the letter was sent on the recommendation of its attorney, John Papa.

"I feel you're directing this personally against me," Smith said. "I represent 80 members of the union, and when they ask me questions, I come to you. I don't have time to write down everything that all of these people ask."

Everage responded: "The reason for this type of communication is because now you can't say you heard something, and I can't say I heard something. Smith responded that he takes offense at the action, and Board President John Hamm III told Smith that if he had any further business concerning the contract to discuss, the board would hear it. But other than that, Smith's time was up.

Next, Smith brought up something from the last regular meeting concerning Everage's $10,000 raise in salary for the 1994-95 school year. She said that she will be paid from programs she administered and will save the district $8,000 in the general fund.

Smith charged that there are two teachers in the Madison district who have master's degrees and Chapter 1 qualifications. He said the two teachers also save the district money.

"If Mrs. Everage can say she can save the district money and get a $10,000 raise, they want to know why they have to take a freeze," Smith asked.

Hamm stated that he was not aware of the teachers or their complaints. "I take offense of this board and the (See THREAT, Page 10A)

Health agency may spur fight over related duties

Madison County environmental officials want to make sure a health department isn't a health risk for the Environmental Control Office.

Under a proposal expected to go before the County Board in two weeks, some duties handled by the environmental office, such as well monitoring and private sewage inspections, would be transferred to the health department.

Board member Dick Worthen of Alton, however, said he will oppose any attempts to strip the environmental office of any other responsibilities.

"I will vote for a health department, but I would not support moving anything other than sewage disposal monitoring and other duties spelled out in the proposal from environmental control to the health department," said Worthen, who chairs the Environmental Control Committee.

The environmental office may not be the only county institution threatened.

"What could happen is the whole Environmental Control Committee could be wiped out. I've talked to (Board Chairman) Nellie Hagauer about it but he hasn't decided yet," said board member Bob Stille, chairman of the Health Institutions Committee and the chief architect of the health department proposal.

The Environmental Control Committee could be absorbed by a Health Department Committee to be formed to oversee department operations, Stille said.

"It'll be up to the chairman, depending on what the board decides to do (with the health department proposal) when we vote," Stille said.

The health department proposal, which is set for an Aug. 17 board vote, would provide four basic services: well and private sewage monitoring, restaurant inspections, acute infectious disease control. Those are the basic services required of county health departments by the state.

Crackdown failed, says mother of two

By Bob Slate

A Granite City woman whose former husband was charged last month with neglect to support a child says the arrest warrant is worthless.

Juanita Pickett of Granite City says that laws regarding failure to pay child support will have to be made more strict before they are effective.

"If you bounce a check for $500, it is a felony. If you steal $500 or more, it is a felony. But (Charles) Ragan, the father of her two children) owes more than $8,000 and it's only a misdemeanor," Pickett said.

And because Ragan, 28, has moved to Florida, authorities will not extradite him on the misdemeanor warrant — even if he can be located.

"I guess the warrant is basically useless unless he decides to move back here. I guess, if you don't want to pay child support, you're not going to tolerate it. They will be arrested," Bellcoff said.

Bellcoff blasts city's absentee landlords

By Hiley Schulte
Staff writer

Madison Mayor John Bellcoff says he is in the process of writing letters to Sens. Paul Simon and Carol Mosley-Braun and Congressman Jerry Costello concerning "Section 8 absentee landlords."

Section 8 in the area is operated through Madison County Housing Authority, an affiliate of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Under the program, federal funds are used to pay for 80 percent of the rent in a given housing development. The landlords are also guaranteed housing will be in the same condition after it is rented.

Bellcoff said he is not happy with the run-down apartment buildings associated with Section 8 in Madison, especially in the 1400 block of Third Street and the 1500 block of Second Street.

"These people living under Section 8 trashing the streets, playing boom boxes in their cars through the streets and double parking we're not going to tolerate it. They will be arrested," Bellcoff said.

Bellcoff

Bellcoff reported that condemnations are pending at 15 residences in Madison, including homes on Jefferson Street, Third Street, Rhodes Street, Fifth Street, Washington Avenue, Webster Avenue, Collinsville Avenue, Iowa Street and Grand Avenue.

After consulting City Attorney Casper Nighobos and Grover Braunman, health and humane officer, the mayor and the council learned that both landlords and tenants of Section 8 housing can be arrested for not taking care of their surroundings.

"We'll have to start arresting them," commented Alderman Richard George.

Alderman Norris Horton said, "Some of them are probably just confused as to what (trash) can be taken by the city."

Superintendent of Streets Robert Robbins said couches and similar items can be taken during pick ups, but refrigerators are not accepted.

Clinic embroiled in fight over killing

Alton Alderman Frank Bennett said he plans to meet with Upper Alton residents and drug program officials about complaints in the wake of a murder-suicide at the clinic.

"I've heard the concerns of the citizens and the police are aware of their complaints, and I'm now trying to get in touch with the officials," Bennett said. City officials are also checking to make sure the Community Counseling Center of Northern Madison County Inc., 2615 Edwards St., is operating within zoning requirements. City Planner Phil Kogge said they have not been able to find a copy of the 1981 zoning document.

"If the clinic is exceeding the boundaries of its zoning, then we'll have to sit down and talk with the operators of the clinic," Bennett said.

Residents have complained about loitering clients of the methadone clinic and claim the operation results in drug dealing in the area. The clinic is near Horace Mann School.

The complaints have surfaced in the wake of the murder of methadone program director Judy Miller by client Duane Honchak of Ponton Beach, who then killed himself. Miller, 45, of Berkeley, Mo., was shot in her office about 10:30 a.m. Friday.

Community Counseling officials said they would reserve comment, but a client said closing the drug clinic would be an overreaction.

"I've been going there five years and have never seen anyone go near the grammar school," the client, who asked not to be identified, said. "People up there know it's a federal offense to sell drugs there. They may be addicts, but they're not stupid. Nobody deals drugs there."

But Miller had apparently been made aware of a possible problem with drug dealing near the clinic and had taken steps to stop it, a source close to the clinic said.

The methadone clinic serves clients trying to break addictions to heroin and morphine. It is just one of several Community Counseling programs.

Neighbors have called for the clinic to move, saying they often witness drug deals and fights among the clients.

Debbie Cox, who lives across Edwards Street from the clinic, began collecting signatures Monday on a petition calling for the methadone clinic to move.

"We'll also be meeting with the mayor and all the aldermen," Cox said.

Mayor Bob Towse could not be reached for comment.

"Getting rid of that clinic would have a devastating effect," he said. "This is what keeps us off the street."

Community Counseling officials said they were not commenting on the incident until after Miller's funeral, scheduled Tuesday in Pontiac, Ind.

"We're dealing with Judy's death today," clinic spokeswoman Dawn Moshill said Monday. "We had a critical incident debriefing for all the staff and are dedicating the day to Judy's memory."

2 Madison officers promoted

The Madison City Council Tuesday approved two recommendations from the Board of Police Commissioners for promotions in the Madison Police Department.

Sergeant Steve Skoklo was promoted to lieutenant, due to Lieutenant Paul Bargiel currently holding the chief of police position.

Patrolman John Bewick was promoted to sergeant because of Skoklo's promotion. Both positions took effect Aug. 1.

Police Chief Paul Bargiel reported that the two new police officers, Patrolman David Patrick and Patrolman John Richardson, have begun work. Patrick began duty on Aug. 1, and Richardson reported to the police training institute in Champaign Aug. 1.

Bargiel also announced that estimates to enlarge/secure the front area of the police department don't exceed $7,500.

In other police improvements, Bargiel said the police department is trying to expand the in-house computer system with funds received from the Madison County Housing Authority. And, the department has applied for another grant with the housing authority.

The council approved a request from St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church for permission to hold its 64th annual Parish Picnic Sept. 16, 17 and 18. The board agreed to block off Alton Street and part of Tenth from Lee to Alton.

The council approved city bills for July 29 through Aug. 2 totaling $65,245.05.

No charges in stabbing

Madison police reported that an investigation is continuing, but no one has been charged in a stabbing in Madison Tuesday night.

Michael L. Hudson, 39, of Madison, suffered lacerations to the left side of the neck, right eyebrow and left ear after he was allegedly stabbed with a steak knife following a chase and fight.

According to police reports, witnesses Jerome Kirkland, 39, and Beatrice Wooten, 44, both of Madison, were sitting in the front yard of Wooten's residence in the 1600 block of Fourth Street, when they observed Hudson being chased south on Washington Avenue by a black male wearing a dark-colored tank top and possibly blue jeans.

Kirkland and Wooten reported that the chase continued to Fourth Street and down the sidewalk to the 1600 block. Apparently, Hudson stopped running and turned around to face his assailant.

Witnesses said a fight started, and Hudson was allegedly stabbed with a steak knife.

The police report stated the suspect then ran back to Washington Avenue and out of sight. Hudson was treated for "not life-threatening" injuries at the St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

When police questioned Hudson, he admitted having been stabbed, but he does not want to press charges, police reported.

Madison police said no charges have been filed, but the investigation continues.

Hofeld tours shelter here Candidate says vital need being met

By Hiley Schulte
Staff writer

Al Hofeld, Democratic candidate for Attorney General, said a local shelter for battered and abused women is meeting a vital need.

But more shelters are needed, he said.

On Thursday, Hofeld toured the Phoenix Crisis Center in Granite City to observe its inner workings and the needs of shelters for abused women and children.

Hofeld said the issue of domestic violence is a primary interest of his.

"I'm interested in getting more of these shelters, more counseling and longer time limits. I'm also interested in getting counseling for the men," Hofeld said.

The Phoenix Crisis Center has been in existence for 10 years. Its capacity is 17 women and children, and 86 percent of the time it is full.

Women and children are limited to six weeks in the shelter, but Director Carol Chiappa does grant extensions.

The goal of the center is to find the women and children adequate housing in a non-abusive sphere, and to provide counseling and means of education.

"If they don't have a G.E.D. when they get here, they do when they get out," Chiappa said.

The shelter receives $28,000 in grant money from the attorney general's office each year.

Hofeld said he would like to see more grant money spent for more shelters.

"We need to do what we're doing, but we need to do more of it. There just aren't enough shelters," Hofeld said.

He asked Chiappa if there are many child sexual abuse cases that go through the shelter.

Chiappa told him that there are, and most of them are referred to the shelter by the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS).

Chiappa explained to Hofeld that there are elderly abuse cases as well.

"We've had women here up to the age of 74. People get violent with them about money and being put in a nursing home. Many of them are neglected, sometimes starving," she said.

Hofeld told Chiappa, "We can turn this thing (domestic violence) around. With good people like you, we can."

Chiappa said that as long as funding can be maintained, she believes the Granite City shelter will continue to serve the community very well.

"We teach them how to survive. Last year, 78 percent of the families did not return to abusive situations when they left here. That's a good statistic. We're a small shelter, but our statistics are equal to shelters on a larger scale," Chiappa said.

Blood drive at hospital on Thursday

Take an hour out of your day and save four lives by donating blood.

St. Elizabeth Medical Center will host a community blood drive sponsored by the American Red Cross from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 11, in the Kettler gym, 2100 Madison Ave., in Granite City.

"During the summer, the demand for blood becomes even more critical," said Ruth Ann Gabriel, SEMC blood drive chairperson.

The Kettler gym is easily accessible from the Washington Avenue parking lot. Participants can park in the lot, come into the main Kettler Center entrance and take the elevators or stairs down to the gym, where the drive will be held.

Donors must be at least 17 years old, in good health and weigh more than 110 pounds.

"Participating in the blood drive is a good way to spend an hour. It is volunteer work you can do lying down," Gabriel said.

"Whole blood can be separated into components to treat specific medical conditions. That way several patients can benefit from a single donated unit."

"Every 10 seconds, someone somewhere needs blood," Gabriel said. "In the bi-state area alone, 5,000 units a week are needed to meet the needs of 140 hospitals in 80 Missouri and Illinois counties."

Donated refreshments, including pizza and Pepsi, will be served after you give blood. Door prizes will be awarded throughout the drive.

"Each person gives less than a pint of blood," Gabriel said. "Since the body replaces the liquid portion of the blood quickly, any after-effects are minimal."

Anyone with questions may call Gabriel at 798-3128.

'He really has not changed a lot' S. Roxana woman to attend school reunion with Clinton

A South Roxana resident is headed for the White House to renew acquaintances with a regular guy.

Linda Mizell of South Roxana said of President Clinton after seeing him at their 30-year high school reunion.

Mizell graduated from high school in 1964 with Clinton and went back to Hot Springs, Ark., for the reunion last month.

Mizell, a special education teacher in Bethesda, said she didn't get a chance to talk to Clinton then but plans to make up for lost opportunities at a White House reunion Oct. 9.

Clinton has attended every class reunion at five-year intervals since graduation, and when he was governor of Arkansas, he always invited the crowd back to the mansion the next day. This year he invited everyone to Washington for a party, she said.

"We had to sign up in advance and put down our Social Security numbers for the security check," she said. "A brother and two daughters plan to go along."

"How many times can you go to the White House to see someone you know. It's the chance of a lifetime," she said.

Mizell said Clinton chatted all his classmates at the reunion. "He's still super smart and very friendly and remembers everyone's name."

"It was a big turnout on Saturday night at the Arlington Hotel, one of the elite hotels where the class held its senior prom."

"Clinton danced and talked with everyone. That was one thing I noticed. He was not impatient and gave whoever he was with his undivided attention. You may not agree with his politics, but he's really a nice guy."

Mizell said Secret Service agents were everywhere and kept security tight but the evening turned into a laid-back affair with no news media.

"The only records were the numerous videotapes made by the people themselves. They wanted him to have a good time, too," she said.

"I left at 3 (a.m.) and he was still dancing. He played cards later that night with friends in his room at the hotel and went jogging the next morning around 40 (a.m.)," she said.

Mizell voted for Clinton in 1992 because she knew him but missed up a chance to dance with him at the ball.

"I didn't have the nerve to ask him, and I regret it now. Every one was clamoring around him, and I didn't want to be a groupie. But I kept my eye on him because I wanted to remember everything."

The now-famous picture of young Bill Clinton meeting President Kennedy was reprinted in the senior class yearbook and was the first real clue anyone had that the Trojan High School Band drum major and saxophone player of the '60s would grow up to be special.

"At the time, I guess we all knew it, especially after he came back with that picture. He was just supercharged from meeting the president," she said.

One of Clinton's high school teachers, Mrs. Henry Iron, said (See REUNION, Page 10A)

Madison city government will soon be more accessible to the public.

Madison Mayor John Belcoff announced at Tuesday's regular city council meeting that Madison County Community Development had approved a $125,000 grant that will make the Madison City Hall handicapped-accessible with the installation of an elevator.

Belcoff was notified in late July that the application for funding for the City Hall-Phase II project was approved by the Grants Committee and the Madison County Board. Funding is expected to be available in early October.

Belcoff had come under fire last year from citizen groups who complained that City Council meetings — held on the second floor of City Hall — were not accessible to handicapped individuals and others who could not negotiate the stairs to the second-story council chambers.

Belcoff has moved his office to the first floor to accommodate the public, but City Hall does have ample space on the ground floor to accommodate council meetings.

Once the elevator is installed, Belcoff said, his office will be moved upstairs to allow for expansion of the police department.

Fill us in on jail, county board

The indecision with which the Madison County Board is approaching the issue of expanding the county jail is not encouraging.

Now a proposal to expand the 178-bed jail by 62 more beds has suddenly mushroomed into adding 110 beds.

And funding of the expansion—estimated at $3 million for the more modest proposal to $4.5 million for the larger expansion—has gone from extending a property tax to dipping into county reserves to, at the moment, a combination of the two.

When the 62-bed expansion was first proposed, county officials thought they could pay for the project by continuing a 1.74-cent property tax originally levied 15 years ago to build the jail. When they learned such taxes could only be used for construction and not for renovation or expansion projects, they lobbied the Legislature to change the law.

While the statute change nearly fell victim to the machinations of the overtime budget session, it was ultimately approved and at this writing awaited the governor's signature.

In the meantime, however, County Board sentiment shifted position to back funding of the project out of the county's $9.7 million in reserves.

And fast on the heels of that shift, board members decided that the project really wasn't what they wanted or needed after all and that a 62-bed expansion would too quickly become obsolete.

Now, in the latest chapter, board members and their architect are back with their new and improved proposal—a plan nearly double in size of the first. They're also debating funding mechanisms for the plan, which could include extending the tax, assuming the governor approves it, using reserves or a combination of both.

Perhaps most alarming about this plan is that it does not yet address the potential costs of acquiring the additional property adjacent to the jail in downtown Edwardsville that would be needed for the larger expansion. Nor does it consider the significant costs of staffing.

We have said in this space before and we continue to believe that taxpayers who are more than ever concerned about crime will be willing to make a reasonable investment for an adequate jail.

But we think the County Board owes those taxpayers a full airing of all the aspects and ramifications of such a major jail expansion before taking action.

And, meanwhile, the St. Clair County Jail is not at capacity, and has put out the word that it wants to house inmates from other counties.

Candidate not a 'seasoned' politician

TO THE EDITOR:

Beginning at the age of 18 years, until we leave this world, we, as Americans are blessed with the freedom to vote. Not only on issues and how they are carried out, but also for the people we feel are best qualified and/or committed to the purpose and duties of the office for which they are presenting themselves.

On Nov. 8 we will have another opportunity to exercise our rights by electing people to fill federal, state, and local offices.

For those who are residents of Madison County this year, I appreciate this opportunity to introduce Bob Ramsey, the candidate running on the Republican ballot for Madison County Clerk.

He is not a "seasoned" politician, but rather a new comer to the business of politics.

He is a family man, 37, who makes his home in Troy with his wife Karyn and their three children. They've lived in Troy the past 12 years. They belong to the Highland Church of Christ where they worship together regularly and are active and concerned Christians.

Bob is a 1978 graduate, with a degree in business, from Harding University in Searcy, Ark.

He has eight years of banking experience. Currently, he's working for a well-known mortgage company out of St. Louis, as a loan officer.

Bob has been my friend and Christian brother for over 11 years and today I'm proud to say he is also my choice for the office of Madison County Clerk.

I believe and trust him to put forth his best efforts in order to provide the most honest and efficient services that can be offered to us.

He has made his commitment, he is willing to learn and work diligently. All he requires and asks for now is the opportunity to hold this office, whereas, he will do his very best at becoming an asset to our county government.

I, personally, ask that you consider him for our newly elected Madison County Clerk this Nov. 8.

School lunches being improved

TO THE EDITOR:

Bold new changes to the nation's 48-year-old school lunch program are being heralded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's "Healthy Kids" campaign. This new initiative, announced June 8 by U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy and Assistant Secretary Ellen Haas, seeks to update the nutrition standards for the national school lunch and breakfast programs and reverse a national trend that indicates Americans consume too much fat.

The centerpiece of the proposal is the requirement that school meals meet the Dietary Guidelines for Americans by the 1998 school year. A recent USDA study of school lunches found that only 1 percent of our nation's schools meet the U.S. dietary guideline of no more than 30 percent fat. The proposed rules limit on fat, sodium and cholesterol and require more dietary fiber by increasing the use of fresh fruits and vegetables.

Under this proposal the current meal pattern for school breakfasts and lunches, now based on quantities of foods served, would be replaced with a more flexible nutrient standard menu planning system.

Improving customer appeal through more nutrition education for students; helping schools get the best value for their nutrition dollar; and streamlining administration are key elements of the proposal. USDA's school lunch program reaches more than 25 million children each day, half of whom are needy. Its school breakfast program serves 5 million children each day, the majority of whom are needy.

Improving the nutritional standards of school lunches and breakfasts promises to have an enormous impact on the health of our nation's children. Parents, teachers, school administrators, food service and health professionals and other interested parties are encouraged to submit comments on the proposed rules by Sept. 8.

The proposed rules were published in the June 10 Federal Register. Interested parties may obtain a copy of the Federal Register at their local library or write to USDA FNS, Child Nutrition Division, 3101 Park Center Drive, Alexandria, Va., 22302.

letters of reference, which she got from two of her teachers at Granite City High School. Then, she had to be selected through an interview process. And finally, she had to come up with about $5,000 for the trip.

She did all three. The Student Ambassador Program began in 1988 when President Dwight D. Eisenhower founded People to People. He believed individual Americans reaching out in friendship to citizens of other countries could contribute significantly to world peace.

The People to People Student Ambassadors Program to the People's Republic of China is a project that combines a strong educational focus with lots of fun activities. During the three-week itinerary, students ambassadors visit many interesting cities, including Beijing, Jinan, Qufu, Shijiazhuang Village, Qingdao, Shanghai, Suzhou, Wuxi, Hangzhou and Hong Kong.

Audrey and 94 other students, with 10 leaders, left June 29 for Los Angeles, Calif., and from there, they went to China to get to know it in a way most visitors only dream of.

They spent nights with Chinese families in the Chinese country, side at Shijiazhuang Village, climbed the Great Wall and attended welcoming receptions with local civic officials.

Audrey liked climbing the Great Wall more than anything else she did during her trip. "It was really awesome," she said. "This thing was built thousands of years ago to keep enemies away. It was a real shock to actually climb it."

Audrey said that the itinerary changed somewhat, but the trip still included the scheduled cities, and she still "had a good time."

She said that not only did she make many friends from the United States who also went on the trip, but she liked the Chinese people, too. "All Chinese people are always shorter than you," she commented.

Audrey's knowledge of the Chinese language is limited to words and phrases like "hi" and "how are you?" She laughed that when she used those words, many times the Chinese would continue on with the conversation.

"You were like, whoa wait a minute, I don't know what you're saying," she said.

Fortunately, there were many Chinese-Americans who went on the trip and had learned Chinese from their parents. So, they took care of many of the language barriers.

Audrey said the group visited many nice gardens and temples. She saw the Yellow River. She visited silk and embroidery factories and saw a fashion show.

Even though one U.S. dollar is worth eight Yuans (a Chinese dollar), Audrey still spent her share on souvenirs. While in China, she picked up several T-shirts, kimonoes, a flute and pins. "I just got a lot of things," she admitted.

Something else she got in China was homesick.

She said that is why she doesn't think she could ever be a foreign exchange student. Her exchange student in Sweden for a year.

"I wouldn't want to be gone a whole year. Three weeks was fine for me. I don't want to leave my parents. I was homesick by the second week, but I still had a good time," said Audrey.

However, something that really made Audrey appreciate home were the times she spent in Chinese homes. Not exactly easy living.

"There was no air conditioning, no running water, the floor was wet and they didn't have a kitchen. They cooked outside."

Even the home of a very rich family in Wuxi couldn't compare to Audrey's good old home in Granite City because there was no inside bathroom.

Speaking of restrooms, Audrey said there were two different kinds even at public places. They had the normal restrooms that we see everywhere in the United States and another bathroom which was just a hole in the ground. And, at some of the gardens and temples, people had to pay to use the bathroom.

Even though Audrey found some difficulty in China, she said she plans to go back someday because she really liked it and had a good time.

"I want to go back someday to see some of the friends I made, and see how it changes," she said.

But for now, Audrey is back in Granite City, with a display of her souvenirs showing at the Granite City Branch Library, and her stomach ache is cured.

Yes, stomach ache. Audrey said: "The food was OK, but it upset my stomach."

She's not sure what caused it, but she knew how to cure it.

According to Audrey's mother, Lucille, when Audrey called from the airport to tell her parents she was almost home, the first thing she said was, "Mom, have some pizza ready. I'm tired."

Simon now connected electronically

Comments, inquiries and letters to Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., can now be sent electronically through the Internet, Simon announced.

A worldwide network of computer networks, the Internet links together the large commercial communications services (such as CompuServe, Prodigy and America Online) as well as thousands of educational government and corporate networks and individual users.

Electronic messages sent to Simon at SENATOR@SIMON.SENATE.GOV will receive a routine electronic acknowledgment.

For senders who include a name and postal address in their message, Simon will also send a specific response to their concern, question or problem through the U.S. mail.

"I want to make it as easy as possible for Illinoisans to communicate their positions on issues, to request information or to ask for help in dealing with a federal agency," said Simon, who has held nearly 600 town meetings in Illinois since his election to the Senate in 1994, more town meetings than any other senator in Illinois history.

In addition to electronic mail capabilities, full Internet users (using Gopher or the File Transfer Protocol known as FTP) can view and download files placed on the system by Simon and other Senate offices and committees.

There are two directories for documents: RELEASES includes news releases from Simon's office and a regular column written by Simon. GENERAL includes a brief biography of Simon and will include other items of interest. They are available at the following sites:

On the INTERNET FTP: ftp.senate.gov login: anonymous, cd member/ill/simon

On the GOPHER: gopher.senate.gov
"Many people who used to write letters now write electronically. I welcome their input," said Simon.

Granite City Rotary installs '94-95 officers

At a gala 70th anniversary party held at Sunset Hills Country Club on June 29, the Granite City Rotary Club installed its 1994-95 officers and directors.

Officers installed were: Rosemarie Brown, president; Elmer Stille, president-elect; Dr. Charles King, vice president; Michael Thornton, secretary; Stille, treasurer; and Robert Maxwell, sergeant-at-arms. New members of the board of directors include: John Mohl and Jerry Mayberry.

The party, organized around the theme of "Granite City and the World of 1924," featured a display of ROTAFEST trophies, music by pianist Ed Nicholson during a social hour, the Sunset Hills buffet, and guest speaker Mearl Justus, St. Clair County sheriff.

In attendance, representing Rotary International, were Richard Federer, district governor-elect for 1994-95, and his wife, Shirley, and district governor's representative Floyd Rogier and his wife, Eunice.

Bill Terrell was presented with a first-time Rotarian of the Year Award for his many contributions both to Rotary and to the community. Dan Brown, Dennis Orsey and Bob Stevens were named as Rotar Paul Harris fellows.

Club Historian Irvin Slate installed three new Rotarians: Paul Abert, Jan Quanton and Judy Whitaker.

Past District Governor Rich Suss installed the 1994-94 Rotary Ann officers: President, Lois Winter; vice president, Judy Stille; treasurer, Helen Cook; and secretary, Valerie Stevens.

Richard Kerch was designated as an honorary Rotarian.

The evening program contained a history of the founding of the Granite City Rotary Club and its early accomplishments, compiled by Kerch.

Rosemarie Brown, who becomes the first woman president of the 70-year-old club, said, "I'm proud to say I'm a Rotarian, but I'm even more proud to be able to say I'm a member of the Granite City Rotary Club. Not only do we have a dedicated membership, we also have an involved membership and a good Rotary Club revolves around that kind of involvement."

"There is much to be done in our community and who better to get it done than this Rotary Club? So tonight, I'm issuing a challenge to each member to become even more involved so that each can feel great enthusiasm and work together to make this a great Rotary year."

St. Clair County Sheriff Mearl Justus was the featured speaker at the event.

The incoming sergeant-at-arms, Bob Maxwell, right, accepts a drill sergeant hat and fire bucket from Loren Davis, the retiring sergeant-at-arms.

Salvation Army plans mid-year appeal

Have you ever taken anything for granted?

Most of us do. We just know that tomorrow will bring three meals, plenty to drink and beds to sleep on.

If we get sick, medicine will be there. If we get hot, on goes the air conditioning. Of course, we know if boredom should set in, we can take in a movie, go to the park or out to the ball game. Something is always out there for us to do.

Sometimes we even take each other for granted. We sometimes fail to stop and think about the family down the street. They appear to be doing fine; after all, they drive a fairly new car.

However, what we don't know is that dad may have lost his job two months ago and the family is barely able to survive. One of the children may be very sick and there is no insurance. Of course, don't forget that fairly new car — the repossession company hasn't.

One of the most common occurrences in our society today is taking it for granted that the 67-year-old woman down the block doesn't need anything. After all, she's been saving for 67 years.

She must be loaded.

This is sometimes not the case. In fact, she may have a savings account of $207 and that's because she just deposited her Social Security check. There are many, many situations like this that are common, everyday occurrences, if only we would open our eyes and ears and then let our hearts decide.

This is where the Salvation Army comes into play. Begun more than 100 years ago with a slogan "Heart to God and Hand to Man," the sole intent was the winning of souls for Christ and assisting fellow man in any way at any time.

Today, nothing has changed. Poverty is still here, as well as the homeless, the hungry, the need of the elderly and the cry of children in need. The Salvation Army takes these unfortunate situations for granted, only because they are reality.

The Salvation Army is located in Granite City and is considered to be responsible for all of Southwest-Madison County. It serves people from all walks of life, 365 days a year.

It offers a back-to-school program aiding children with school supplies. Day camps and summer camps are offered for children to learn and enjoy.

There are also year-round programs such as: Boy's Clubs, Girl's Clubs and Home League, a women's group from 16 to 110 years of age.

It also helps people with food and other various needs with a welfare assistance program, five days a week. And if disaster should hit, like the Flood of '93, it is ready to roll in a moment's notice.

If you or your loved ones should ever happen to fall, you can take it for granted, the Salvation Army will be there to pick you up and ease your pain. The Salvation Army is always seen at Christmas ringing those bells and collecting donations to help people in need.

Unfortunately, the needs of the people in this community outweigh Christmas collections. Therefore, "Christmas in July," a mid-year event designed to help those less fortunate has been initiated. Please watch the Journal next week for a special envelope and read what Fred Flintstone has to say. Then let your heart decide.

Please remember to mail your donation in and never take the less fortunate for granted. Please help.

Legislation boosts Korean War fund-raising efforts

Gov. Jim Edgar has signed legislation to boost fund-raising efforts for a state memorial to the "forgotten" war in Korea.

The measure approved Thursday and effective immediately will earmark $2 of the $15 charged for special "Korean War Veteran" license plates to build a memorial in Springfield's Oak Ridge Cemetery for state residents who died in the war.

The proposed memorial site is adjacent to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. Any funds from the license plate fees will be added to a private fund-raising drive, which has raised $168,000.

Rep. Ron Stephens of Troy, a chief sponsor of the bill, said, "This is not an earth-shattering piece of legislation compared to some others, but it's very important to thousands of Illinois families."

Stephens, who was wounded while serving during the Vietnam War, said his oldest brother fought in Korea, and his father in World War II. He said Korea "was in many ways the forgotten war."

"When my father came home, there were victory parades, and when I came home in a litter, we were reviled until later (when) the attitude changed, but when my brother came home from Korea he got neither reaction," he said.

In a news release, the governor said, "Thousands of Illinois men and women have lent their financial and moral support to making this monument a reality."

Reunion

pushed him into going to Oxford. She was back for the reunion and cornered Clinton to tell him a few more things she thought he should do, Mizell said.

Thirty years ago, Clinton was more of a self-described dork than a superhero or a lady's man.

"A lot of us were dorks then," Mizell said, but like Clinton, most of the 375 classmates went on to become successful. Several of his close friends have jobs in Washington, she said.

Clinton graduated fourth in his class, was a National Merit Scholarship semifinalist and was president of his junior class. He shared arship semina and was president of his junior class. He shared an English class with Mizell and became good friends with one of her brothers, Harvey Arington.

"He was well liked and into everything but not a lady's man in high school. He was like everybody's boy next door."

The class received a reunion souvenir cup inscribed and signed by Clinton in gold.

Before the party ended, Clinton danced with the girl he took to the senior prom, filled up on the city's famous McClard's barbecue and posed for a class picture. A print signed by every member of the Class of '64 will go back to the White House in mid-August as a 48th birthday present for Clinton.

"It was just a fun evening with a regular guy who is the same as he's always been. Nobody in the class was raised with riches, but he's always been. Nobody in the class was raised with riches, but he's always been. Nobody in the class was raised with riches, but he's always been."

Why you treat the union," Smith said.

Everage responded, "I take offense to you calling me a liar."

Hamm then told Smith that the board cannot tolerate him conducting business at board meetings that should only be addressed in negotiations.

"Take the union off the agenda, and I'll speak as a member of the public. I'm going to let this go because I'm upset now," Smith stated.

When Smith was done speaking, Hamm asked the board if any member had anything to say.

Board member James Newsome said that obviously several items concerning the teachers need to be addressed in negotiations.

"Many things have been said in confidence, and they should be kept there," he said. "I've got mixed emotions about a lot of this, but I'm going to let it go."

Negotiations are continuing between the Madison teachers' union and the board. Both sides have hired professional negotiators, and according to Hamm, the major item causing disagreement is money.

Newsome has said that union members originally agreed to a wage freeze, but changed their position after learning of the pay raise Everage received and the $9,000 in unused vacation pay that former Superintendent Kostelnick received.

The negotiations have been going on since Jan. 31.

port, you just leave the state," Pickett said.

Ragan is one of nine fathers allegedly behind in child support charged July 27 by Madison County State's Attorney Bill Hane. The nine men have 18 children among them and a misdemeanor complaint was filed for each child involved. Each charge carried a bond of $10,000.

Sources have said that Ragan allegedly owes her $4,358 in back child support for their two children, Brianna, 3, and Brandon, 8. She said that Ragan also allegedly owes the Illinois Department of Public Aid $4,272.

"Even if it costs money to bring him back from Florida, if they can get the money he owes to the state it would be worth it," Pickett said.

"Or they could even take it from what he owes me. The thing is, if he would take responsibility for his children, I wouldn't have to be on public aid. I'm just tired of him slipping through the cracks," she said.

"If it was me who took off and left these kids to fend for themselves, to find food and a roof over their heads, I'd be a monster," she said.

Bellcoff

The discussion about rundown apartments led into another council discussion about $57,000 in uncollected trash bills.

Alderman Ronald Grzywacz said he has reviewed a list of Madison residents who have paid for trash compared with those who have not.

"It's not fair," he said. "The ones who are paying are the ones on retirement and pension. Those that have the money aren't paying."

After a request by Bellcoff, Grzywacz made a motion to authorize Nighthogian to file charges against the unpaid trash bills. The motion passed unanimously.

the trustees failed to perform their statutory responsibility of providing adequate funding for the efficient operation of her office.

The trustees denied that the cut was based on a comparison of assessor costs in similar townships.

Attorneys representing Laub and the trustees agreed April 11, during a closed session of an agency meeting, that Laub would drop the lawsuit if the Town Board approved a budget of at least $327,786 for her office for fiscal year 1994-95.

22 jobs at the health department could be filled by county workers already performing similar duties, most of them from the environmental office.

Worthen said he is worried some board members could demand the transfer of more than well and sewage monitoring once the proposal comes to the County Board floor.

"You never know what's going to happen in there so I want to make my concerns and the reasons for them known before we take a vote," Worthen said.

Hagnauer, who makes committee appointments, is out of town this week at a convention and could not be reached for comment.

Worthen said dismantling his committee would damage the effectiveness of the Environmental Control Office by depriving staff members of the advice and input of committee members.

"I've particularly given a lot of my time and soul to the solid waste issue over the past 10 years and I wouldn't want to see anything happen to that," Worthen said.

Worthen has called a special meeting of the Environmental Control and Health Institutions committees this week to discuss the issue.

Getting organized key to financial planning

This is the second article of a series entitled "Making Sense of Your Money." For reprints of previous articles, simply telephone the number at the conclusion of this article.

Successful personal financial planning can only begin with one step — getting organized. This would include:

- Setting up a record system.
- Determining where you stand financially and.
- Setting financial objectives.

Record system

An effective home record-keeping system can be simple to set up and easy to maintain. A good system is comprehensive enough to be useful, yet simple enough to encourage regular use. Organize records around the following basic files:

- An active file used to monitor current budget, organize bills, keep track of important papers and help prepare the current year's tax return. This could be something as simple as a box with manila folders or a small file cabinet purchased at a business supply store.

- An inactive file is used to store past-tax returns in the event you are ever audited. It should contain important papers — formerly stored in your active file — that are more than three years old. Generally after six years, you can discard most of your records. Home improvement receipts are important to save because some improvements increase the original value of the property and are need for proof.
- A safe deposit box should store legal and important personal papers, ownership records and estate planning documents. Keep an updated list of the contents of the safe deposit box in your active file.

Determining where you stand financially

Personal financial statements are important in showing an individual's financial well-being. Two types of statements should be prepared.

The first is a statement of personal assets and liabilities which will summarize your assets and liabilities and determine your net worth. Periodically determining net worth helps you gauge your financial progress and track how you are doing relative to inflation.

The second is a personal budget, which summarizes where your income comes from and how it is spent. A budget is an essential part of any successful plan because it provides a moving picture of your financial situation. You can call my office number below for copies of these statements free of charge.

Setting financial objectives

It is critical to put your objectives in writing and be as specific as possible. Also, periodically review your objectives for progress or needed adjustment. Make your objectives reasonable and with a set time frame. Objectives that are virtually impossible to reach become burdensome and it is easy to lose sight of what you are trying to accomplish.

Establish your time frames as three periods, short-term (within two years), medium-term (three to five years) and long-term (beyond five years).

Next week's article will discuss the statement of personal assets and liabilities and the budget in more depth as these are key documents to put one on track for finding their financial independence.

New owners at Parkside Market

The Parkside Market, located at 3201 Maryville Road, has changed owners.

The new owners of the business are Mr. and Mrs. John Sanfilippo and their son, John Sanfilippo Jr., who live in St. Charles, Mo., and they owned and operated a successful convenience store in Richmond Heights, Mo. Sanfilippo decided to retire, so he sold the business.

Then he changed his mind, bought Parkside Market and moved to Granite City.

John Sobol of John Sobol Realty, who handled the transaction, said, "They decided they would rather wear out than rust out."

Sobol noted that Parkside Market sells groceries, liquor and gasoline, and is one of the few independent convenience stores which does a big volume.

The Sanfilippos took over the business July 13 and plan extensive interior and exterior remodeling to the building.

The original owners of Parkside Market are from Collinsville.

She is a full-time student at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, so there are four other employees at the tanning salon.

Catalogs feature health products

K mart Corporation has launched its first national "Home Health Care" catalog at more than 1,660 K mart pharmacies.

The catalog provides K mart customers with a broad assortment of health-care products for their daily living needs.

Customers will be able to select from almost 300 items featured in the "Home Health Care" catalog and will receive delivery within 24 to 48 hours at the Granite City K mart location, 3655 Nameoki Road.

Products to minimize the effects of illness, injury or disabilities are available, including daily living aids, bedroom accessories, mobility assistance items, bathroom and grooming aids and wheelchair accessories.

"Our mission is to improve the total health of our customers. We are very excited about the 'Home Health Care' catalog and the service we will be able to provide our customers and their families," said Will Connolly, pharmacy manager.

As many as 11 million Americans need home health-care services, according to the National Association for Home Care. As hospital stays are shortened, the percentage of patients discharged to home health care will continue to increase, the association said.

"K mart pharmacies are positioned to help these patients manage their home health-care products and prescription needs," said Alice Wachol, divisional vice president of merchandising.

"Our licensed pharmacists are trained to help patients select products from a broad assortment of health-care merchandise at outstanding value."

"K mart pharmacists recognize that their patients' families have many health-care needs."

"To improve their quality-of-life, both the caregiver and the patient need a convenient outlet like K mart to obtain home health-care products that will enhance their lives," Wachol added.

K mart pharmacists work with local doctors and nurses to provide quality home health-care services intended to enhance the lives of their patients and families.

From minor aches and pains to exercise and nutrition, the pharmacists offer their professional opinion and over-the-counter remedies and provide help in the selection of home health-care products.

"With efforts to control rising costs and an increase in the over-65-year-old patient category, we anticipate a growing reliance on K mart pharmacy services, particularly in relation to home recovery," Connolly said.

"In many cases, home care is a cost-effective service, not only for individuals recuperating from a hospital stay but also for those who, because of functional or cognitive disabilities, are unable to take care of themselves," said Ken Dychtwald, Ph.D., president and chief executive officer, AARP.

Wave Inc. K mart is one of the largest purchasers of pharmaceutical drugs and, with the new catalog, will be one of the largest retail distributors of home health products in the country.

K mart serves America with more than 4,000 retail outlets including K mart, Builders Square, Borders-Waldenbooks, The Sports Authority and OfficeMax.

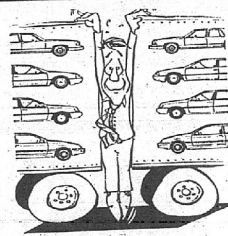

On staff — Dr. Charles King Jr., chiropractic physician with The Back Pain Treatment Center in Granite City, was on the medical staff at the Budweiser International Water Ski Tour at Creve Coeur Lake July 30 and 31.

'Experimenting' with 3 officials

More than once, this corner has reminded followers of high school sports in this area to write the Illinois High School Association, regardless if the intent was to update a record book, pay a compliment or vent disapproval.

Sometimes, the best first step might be through an administrator at a high school, but I'm convinced going directly to the IHSA in Bloomington can be worthwhile.

THAT'S HOW I felt recently upon reading the 1994-95 rules book for boys and girls high school soccer.

A few years back, I wrote the IHSA telling it of the stupidity of using three officials for postseason soccer games but allowing just one whistle on the field — in the hands of a referee.

This year's rule book on page 46 includes the following:

"At this time, state associations are encouraged to authorize on a statewide or area-wide basis, experimentation with or continuing their experiments with the three-whistle officiating system."

"To implement the experiment, state associations may request preliminary information and background materials from the National Federation of State High School Associations staff. The National Soccer Committee intends to consider authorization of this method of officiating in the future when the written description of the officiating system is completed."

WHILE I BELIEVE it nonsense to suggest experimenting, the idea of having three officials and three whistles on the field has enough logical support to prevent any explanation for the need.

You don't have to be a soccer fan to realize only one official with a whistle is like taking guns from police in a ghetto.

Among the rules revisions from '94-95, with the rule, National Association comment, and an "as I see it":

Rule: Coaches are required to submit rosters at least five minutes before game time. Comment: "This rule has been written to identify the authorized personnel for each team. The roster will include all players, coaches and bench personnel. A game will not start until the roster is submitted. Compliance will deter conflicts."

ART'S COMMENT: Too often a team would take the field of play and an opposing coach would have no idea of the individuals. For instance, if you had not played a team or it was not from your area, you had to beg to get a lineup which would indicate the players, including whoever you might have read about or heard of previously.

Rule: Substitutes must now report to the scorekeeper prior to entering the game after a score or at the beginning of a period.

Comment: "This addition to the current procedure allows scorekeepers to keep track of who has played and to lessen the possibility of reentry of a disqualified player."

Art's comment: Makes sense to me, but not all schools have designated scorekeepers and are not required to do so by the IHSA, since an official can keep the line on the field and both officials can supervise substitutions.

RULE: SWEATBANDS may be worn if they are made of soft material and are worn on a player's head, wrist or forearm. A sweatband may be worn as a hair control device.

Comment: "This is a new rule addressing sweatbands."

Art's comment: Looks like the manufacturers of sweatbands will profit, and a coach is going to have to determine how many bands he/she will permit. Other than sweat, some of us have too little hair to make a band a concern.

Schuman advances to Junior PGA qualifiers tourney

By Rob Raphael
Correspondent

At least one member of the Granite City High School golf team will return this fall with his game in high gear.

Patrick Schuman of Granite City has spent the summer sharpening his golf game, as the returning junior fired an 81 to finish tied for second at the Junior Gateway PGA Tournament held at Scott Air Force Base July 1.

Schuman

SCHUMAN'S second-place finish means he advances to the Junior PGA qualifiers tournament later this month. He said the date and site of the tournament have not yet been announced.

"I just have to wait and see on that," he said. "But I will play in at least one other tournament this month." Schuman said he would participate in a junior tournament in Highland in August.

"It's getting me in good shape for the upcoming golf season," he said. "I feel like my game is in good shape right now."

He said he also played in the Junior Masters Tournament in late July. He fired scores of 84 and 85 in the two-day tourney held in Quincy.

The Junior Gateway Tournament was held at the

"I feel like my game is in good shape right now."
— Patrick Schuman

Cardinal Creek Golf Course at Scott. Schuman said overall it was a very tough course, but he found some aspects of it catered to his game.

"THE GREENS WERE huge, and that helped. It's a real nice, mature course, the kind that I enjoy playing on."

He said the PGA sponsors the junior tourneys, and that they divide the country up into several areas of competition, and this part of the country is Area 6.

"We played four different tournaments, and each finisher from first through 15th gets a certain amount of points," he said. "Then they add them all up and the top players qualify for the championship rounds. The winners all meet at the Junior PGA Championship."

Schuman said he took up the game of golf just two years ago, and has progressed "quite a bit, especially the last year. The first year was not good — a lot of 90s and 60s on the front nines."

He said he has been taught by another good golfer — his father, Patrick Sr. "He has taught me a lot, especially with the mental approach to the game. I used to get very frustrated at the game."

SCHUMAN SAID HE is definitely college-bound, but he added it would probably be another year before that decision is made. "I would like to go to the University of Illinois," he said. "I went to a summer golf camp there last summer and enjoyed it very much."

He said he would love a golf scholarship at the U of I, but if not, he would like to go there anyway. "It's close by, and it has the great reputation."

As for now, Schuman will focus on the upcoming golf season. "I'm looking forward to it," he said. "We had a good year last year, and I think it can be better this season."

Certainly, one of the team's players will be better.

What did you do over your summer vacation? Andrew Bisto, of Granite City, will have plenty of stories to tell his friends when he returns to school this fall.

BISTO, 9, WAS one of a privileged few who took part in the Coca-Cola classic Wayne Gretzky Hockey Camp in Los Angeles, Cal. during July 25-28.

Approximately 30 youths from across the United States took part in the camp, which randomly selects kids from the 20,000 or so who attend Coca-Cola classic or NHL Future Stars clinics around the country.

The clinics are held in conjunction with local National Hockey League or minor league franchises in 23 U.S. cities.

Bisto traveled to Los Angeles with 12-year old Jason Bozada of St. Louis. The two were picked at the St. Louis-area clinic held in Brentwood.

Participants at the Gretzky camp received two full days of instruction from Gretzky, all-time leading scorer in NHL history, Kirk Muller of the Montreal Canadiens, and St. Louis Blues star winger Brett Hull.

THE NHL FULLY funded Bisto's trip to Los Angeles for the four days during the camp. The campers also visited Disneyland and a California Angels game at Anaheim Stadium.

Bisto said he and his family spent an entire week in Los Angeles, and he enjoyed the time in California. "We had fun out there. The weather was a little cooler, but the trees were wet."

Bisto is the son of John and

"(Hull) said he was working with the team he wanted to play for, and that he wished he could one day play with Wayne."

— Andrew Bisto

Sandy Bisto of Granite City, He said he started skating at the age of five, and last year he played on the Steelers hockey team which plays at the Wilson Park ice rink.

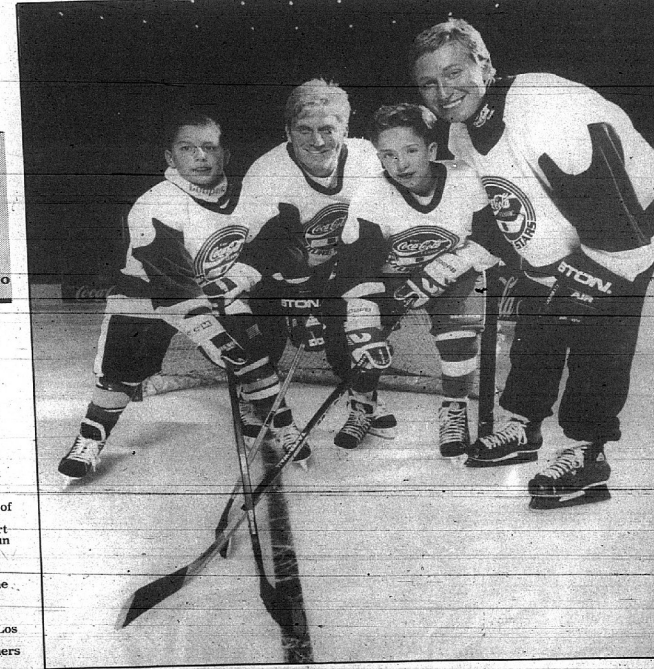

He said his favorite player is Gretzky. "I don't know why, I just like him the best. Mostly, it's because he scores a lot of goals, I guess."

He added he was excited to meet stars like Gretzky and Hull, but there was not much time to talk with them. "We were pretty busy. We had lots of drills, shooting, passing and stick-handling. My favorite part was the scrimmages. It was fun to play with the other guys in such a big rink."

THE CAMP WAS held at The Pond, which is home to the Anaheim Mighty Ducks. The camp was co-hosted by the Mighty Ducks and Gretzky's Los Angeles Kings.

The camp was open to winners aged 7-15. The Future Stars program was created in 1991 to help develop youth hockey in the U.S. and Canada. Since the program's beginning, over 60,000 boys and girls have participated in the clinics.

•Bisto

Bisto said he also enjoyed meeting the Blues' Hull, who is a close friend of Gretzky. He said Hull, who is currently involved in trade rumors with the Blues, mentioned that he enjoys participating in the clinic, as well as working with Gretzky.

Bisto said Hull did talk briefly about the rumors. "He said he was working with the team he wanted to play for, and that he wished he could one day play with Wayne."

Overall, he said he learned a lot at the camp but mostly had fun. He said besides Gretzky and Hull, he enjoyed meeting Muller, as well as many of the other boys and girls who participated.

AS FAR AS telling stories at school, he said that would not be a big deal. "Most of my friends already know about it, and I have seen lots of them since I got back."

"I'll never forget it," said Bisto, who will enter the fourth grade this fall. "It was very exciting, and felt very good."
